

About the Executive Director

Vincent G. Bradley, MA, MED holds a Master's Degree in History from Marquette University in Wisconsin, as well as an MED in School Leadership from Boston College. He has taught Advanced Placement US History, Advanced Placement European History, and been an AP Grader for the College Board for the United States History Exam.

Mr. Bradley has also served as a consultant to iCue, the website developed in a partnership with MIT, NBC News and the College Board. He is a member of the Higher Education Consultants, as well as the National Association for College Admission Counseling. Mr. Bradley is a college admissions expert, and has built a strong private college counseling practice in the Boston, MA area with an emphasis on “fit” and “cost” and “value” for families.

The students Mr. Bradley counsels have attained admission to the following schools: Boston College, Boston University, Cornell University, University of Chicago, UCLA, University of California – Berkeley, Bucknell University, Fordham University, Wake Forest University, University of Richmond, MIT, New York University, Hofstra University, Xavier University, DePaul University, Purdue University, RPI, WPI, University of Michigan, among many, many others.

Mr. Bradley's strong interest in academic enrichment programming and college counseling led him to serve as American International Education Associate's Executive Director for summer programming. His experience in leading students to foreign countries and work counseling students from Asia in prep and college admissions make him an expert in the needs of international families and students.